

Why we do what we do

Helping to build a strong,
caring and prosperous
Saskatchewan

We are the Saskatchewan Government and General Employees' Union. Our 20,000 members live and work in nearly every part of the province. We provide many of the services that families rely on every day: fixing our roads, keeping our communities safe, helping people recover from illness – and much more.

Public services at the heart of your community

Chances are an SGEU member will help you today.

Here are just some of the places you will see the difference our work makes every day of the year – whether we're out on the front lines or working behind the scenes:

- Providing community services from daycares to counselling centres to group homes
- Helping adults learn in post-secondary institutions like SIAST and the Gabriel Dumont Institute
- Serving you as a customer and protecting you as a consumer with the Saskatchewan Liquor and Gaming Authority, and overseeing related industries
- Delivering quality, compassionate health care through the Saskatchewan Cancer Agency and other health service providers
- Keeping our Crowns strong and effective, from Workers' Compensation to Saskatchewan Crop Insurance
- Working for you in provincial government agencies, boards and ministries in agriculture, highways, parks and environment.

Working together to make a difference in your community.

SGEU members know that public services help families, strengthen communities and make it easier for farms and businesses to succeed and prosper. Whether we're fighting fires or teaching in classrooms, we are your neighbours in 530 Saskatchewan communities from Pelican Narrows to Maple Creek.

And through SGEU's standing committees, our members coordinate and support a variety of community projects throughout Saskatchewan, including youth sports and democratic leadership programs to human rights and equity initiatives.

The public services
our members provide make life better for Saskatchewan families and communities.

Delivering — and protecting — services

SGEU is there to protect the public services our members provide — and that you rely on.

When cuts and privatization threaten public services, we speak out, urging the government to reconsider while presenting positive alternatives.

When we see a way to make those services better for you and your family, we speak out for that, too.

And for over 100 years, SGEU has been there to make sure our members are treated fairly and with respect. They make a positive difference in the lives of Saskatchewan families, and we are proud to be their union.
